Mickey has a dog gone problem.

Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, Goofy and Pluto were playing ball in the park. Pluto goes after a fly ball—and disappears! Mickey discovers he's been “dognapped” by the evil Emperor Pete. With his costumes and powers, can Mickey survive the peaks and valleys on the way to Pete's Castle? He's counting on you to help save Pluto.

Mickey must hang tight to avoid the giant buzzard.

When lava gives Mickey a hot foot, the spikes could be a problem.

With help from Goofy, Mickey's ready to scale Pete's Peak.

Aaarrrrrrrggghhh!

(Hello, ape-style.)

We went ape at the Los Angeles Zoo.

We hung with Tzambo, the huge gorilla gang-leader. Ultimate cool. He sat there. Checked us out. Flexed his muscles. Caught a Kool-Aid ice cube. (Fave flavor: Great Bluedini.)

We moved on to the chimps. Four words: one way rowdy bunch.

Next stop: the orangutans. Innocent eyes—but don't turn your back. They'll nail you with a rubber ball. Or worse.

And the gibbons? Who needs MTV? These maestros blew out their voice boxes for us. Literally. In eight-part harmony. Louder than Pearl Jam.

You get the picture. You get the sound. Get more of it in our Apes Big Adventures. So prepare for a wild jungle journey and don't forget to Adventure On!

Here's Frank, D.A.'s editorial assistant, wearing a shirt that was made to fit a gorilla. Next stop: "House of Style" ...not!

SWEDISH PEN PAL

Hi. My name is Katrina Svensson and I moved to Sweden last year, after living nine years in the States. I am 11 years old and really enjoy reading DISNEY ADVENTURES! I love all the puzzles, games and comics. I love drawing and swimming.

KRIS KROSSED!

We disagree with your article "Battle of the Boys" in the October '92 issue. As far as we're concerned, when you write an article, the information must be true. So in plain English, you don't have your facts straight, and your writing is in favor of ABC. It's not fair because Kris Kross is better than ABC! This is how it should have been:

ABC

Hang at the playground on the monkey bars

Can't rap

Can hold a note but can't sing

KRIS KROSS

They don't jump,
they make you jump,
warm you up and show you the way of the rhyme so you don't miss the bus

Can wreck the mike

Aren't singers so shouldn't have to sing

So next time leave Kris Kross to rap magazines and stick to Mickey Mouse!!!

I really enjoyed your article on Brendan Fraser. When he was filming School Ties in Concord, Massachusetts, my father met Brendan and got me his autograph. Brendan said he likes Roald Dahl books and so do I. Your magazine is awesome.

look for a new section in place of Calendar next month. It's called D.A. Buzz —D.A.B. for short—and will be full of fun, facts, freebies and more!

Now Darkwing will go anywhere to quack a case.

It will be crime time forever in St. Canard if F.O.W.L. has their way. Of course, Darkwing Duck has his own ways to cook their goose. But first he must make it through 7 very dangerous levels, where Steelbeak, Quackerjack and Mega Volt are ready and waiting. This is one case where winging it just won't do.

Watch out for Steelbeak's flying eggs, or you'll be fried forever.

Better move fast, 'cause these turtles are anything but slow.

Cool Paula Abdul struts her stuff at a concert benefitting Pediatric AIDS.

The Disney Channel's got the hot concert ticket for February. Watch Paula Abdul, Will Smith and Kris Kross put new twists on childhood nursery rhymes. Even Jason Priestley gets into the act. The concert benefits Pediatric AIDS....As if actor John Stamos's life isn't full enough already! While on a break from the set of "Full House," he recorded a single that will be on the new Beach Boys album. If it's a hit, maybe he'll do a duet with Mary Kate and Ashley Olsen. Remember? They're singers too.

Think you're tough enough to take on the American Gladiators but don't quite meet the height requirement? Then how about trying out for "Nickelodeon Guts"? On this new show, players compete in events such as The Longest Yard (kind of like a bungee-cord race), The Aggro Crag (a 26-foot mountain climb) and Wild Wheels

JENNIE GARTH

W hen Jennie Garth was around 16

years old, she was a contestant in a beauty pageant. One of the judges, a successful Los Angeles talent manager, told Jennie she could be a star. I'm sure, Jennie thought. But she and her mom went out to Los Angeles anyway. They knocked on the manager's door, and the rest, as they say, is Hollywood history.

Now Jennie Garth is a star, playing the wealthy and beautiful Kelly Taylor on "Beverly Hills, 90210." Her life today is far away from the small Illinois farm where she grew up. She was the youngest kid in a large family so she wore old clothes outgrown by her brothers and sisters. "I was the hand-me-down kid," Jennie says.

Today, Jennie buys her clothes new, but says her favorite outfit is a well-worn pair of boxers, a T-shirt and a pair of Birkenstocks (or Birks, as Jennie likes to call them). That's what she wears when she's hanging out in the house she shares with two dogs and a cat. She wants to get a third dog, a big one that will drool all over the place.

Q: Who was your first valentine?

A: There was this one guy—it must have been in fifth or sixth grade—and he used to shake his knees and make my desk move all day long. Every down kid."

year we used to make those stupid little boxes covered with tinfoil and red hearts, and I remember hoping that there was one from him in the box.

Q: Did you want to be an actress when you were a kid?

A: Nope! I wanted to be a grocery store checkout person. I lived in a small town and we didn't have those scanners that they use now. Everything had to be punched on the cash register by hand. I loved punching buttons and moving things. If not that, then I wanted to be a secretary. I love filing and typing.

Q: Does that mean you still like to go to the grocery store?

A: I love it! I look at everything. It's my favorite thing to do.

Q: Then you must be a good cook.

A: I love to cook. But I have kind of an odd way of cooking. I just throw everything together. Whatever's in the fridge goes into my pot. I don't use cookbooks, except when I'm making something special.

Q: Did your mom teach you this method?

A: Nope, my dad did. When I was little, I used to get up and cook breakfast with my dad. If we ran out of milk, we'd make pancakes with mayonnaise or cottage cheese. We'd substitute apple juice for water. We'd just use whatever we had in the house and hope it turned out.

Q: What was it like growing up on a farm?

A: I liked it, but I don't think that I could ever go back to living on a farm after living in Los Angeles. I had three sisters and two brothers. I was the baby, and while I got spoiled a lot, I also got picked on a lot. I shared a room with one of my sisters, and we were the home-ecy types. We were the cooks and the cleaners. My other two sisters slept in another room, and they were the outdoorsy types. They took care of the barn and fed the horses. I argued a lot with those two because they thought I was a sissy.

Q: What was your most embarrassing moment?

A: I was in the fifth grade and I was on my way to this party. There were going to be boys there and I was kind of nervous. Well, a bird went to the bathroom on my arm. I was soooo embarrassed, I called my mom and made her come and get me. I didn't go to the party.

Q: Do you have any bad habits?

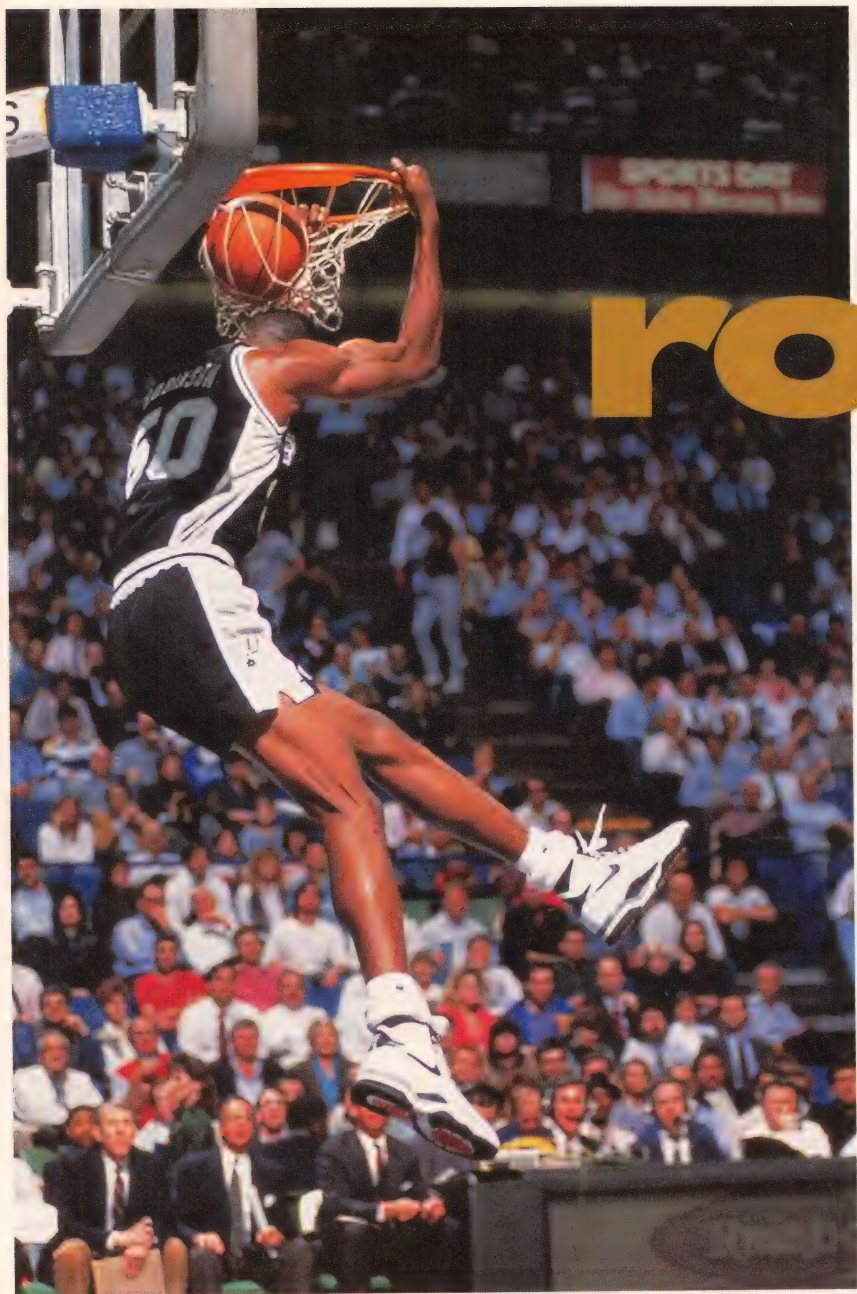

A: I guess my worst habit is that I'm too neat. If someone leaves something on the counter, I'm likely to have a fit. I guess I'm too stubborn, too set in my ways. But my home is the most important thing to me and I like to have it clean.

Q: If you could do anything to make the world fun for kids, what would you do?

A: I would put cotton-candy machines on every corner. And I would hide little Easter eggs—you know, the kind you pull apart that have surprises in the middle. I would fill them with candy and toys and hide them all over the countryside so that everyone could run around all day finding them. That's what I would do. Cotton candy for everyone.

dream player

david binson

W hy do we think

Dave Robinson
is so cool?

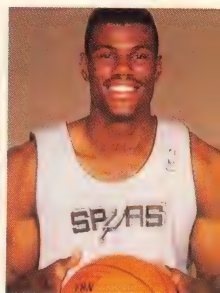

Well, consider this: After his first season with the NBA (1989-1990), he was named Rookie of the Year. At the end of the 1990-1991 season, he led the San Antonio Spurs in scoring (about 25 points per game), rebounds, blocked shots and field-goal percentage. He won a Bronze Medal as part of the 1988 Olympic basketball team and a Gold Medal with the 1992 Olympic "Dream Team."

How high can he jump?
Between 36
and 40 inches

What size shoe does he wear?
Size 16

What's his nickname?
The Admiral

What's his middle name?
Maurice

You'd think that a guy like that would be calling all the shots. Think again. When D.A. called to find out when we could interview Dave, his mom picked up the phone.

"He hasn't called you yet?" she asked. "You sit right there. I'm going to tell him to call you right now."

Sure enough, Dave called within the hour. Nice to know that even multimillionaire superstars have to listen to their moms. ➤

Q: How did you get started playing basketball?

A: I grew. That's basically it. When I was in high school, I grew about three inches a year for five straight years. All of a sudden people were saying, "Do you play basketball? You should, you should." So I really started playing basketball in high school.

Q: If you weren't playing basketball, what would you do?

A: I'd love to be a musician, but I'm not good enough—at least not yet. Actually my strengths are math and science, so I would probably be either a teacher or a scientist or something.

Q: If you could be a superhero, which one would you be?

A: I would be the Silver Surfer. He gets to surf around in the stars, and he is just the most awesome guy that I can think of.

Q: What was your most embarrassing moment?

A: When I was 11 years old, I went to a basketball camp with a bunch of players who were older and a lot bigger than me. One day I was playing with them and I actually got a rebound. Oh, I was so excited! I just went back up and shot the ball and I made it! I was jumping up and down—then the coach pulled me over and said, "Son, you just put it in the wrong basket." The team how dave grew

gave me a lot of trouble for that one.

Q: Which was your favorite book when you were a kid?

A: The Encyclopedia Brown books—I loved those books. They were such fun to read, and they challenged me a little bit. And I liked the Great Brain books by John Fitzgerald. They were about this one kid who was really smart, and every chapter would be about how he would outsmart someone. They were pretty funny.

Q: Do you play other sports?

A: Well, baseball is actually my favorite sport to play. I used to play football, but I don't play it as much anymore. When I get a chance, I like to play tennis, and I used to play racquetball and squash a lot. Just about anything that I can try, I love to play.

Q: If you could play one-on-one with any basketball player, who would it be?

A: I guess I would say Michael Jordan is the one who would be fun to play one-on-one with, because some of the things we do are similar. I think he's really physically gifted. I just happen to be taller than he is.

Q: If there was one thing about basketball you could change, what would it be?

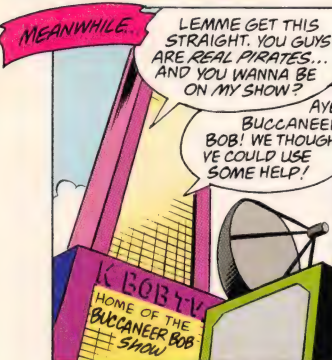

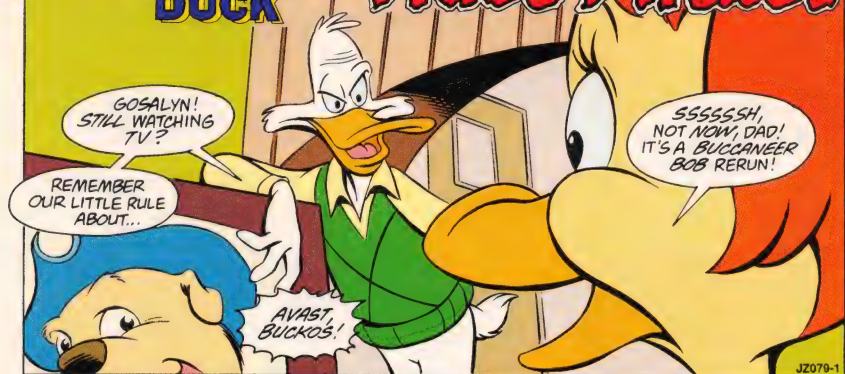

A: Our season—I think it's too long. We play 110, 115 games a year, and you just can't do that at the pace that we play. It's tough and we do it night in and night out.

Q: Do you get nervous on the free-throw line?

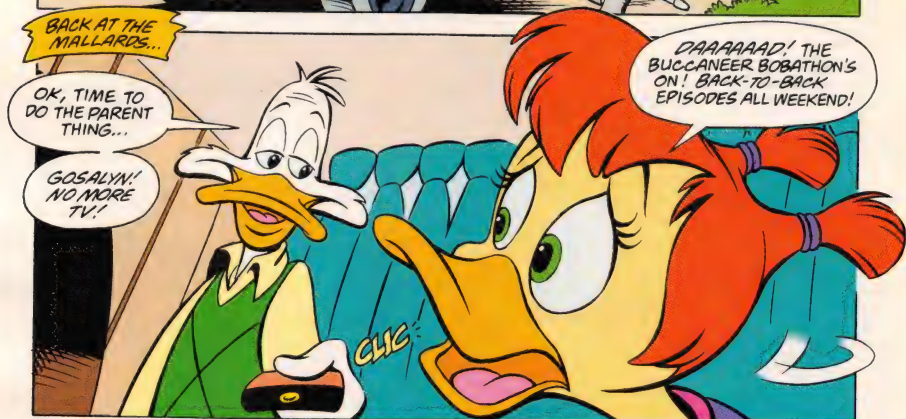

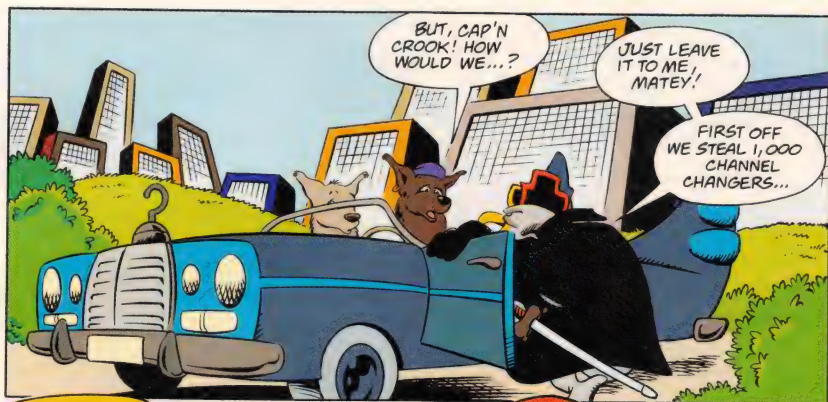

A: No, not really. I don't get nervous about much of anything in a game. What a lot of people don't understand is that playing is where the fun is. It's like in life: Sometimes people miss their whole lives because they're waiting for something to happen—and that's not where the fun in your life is. The fun is every day. That's what I try to tell people about basketball: Hey, the fun part is the game, man, play. It doesn't do you a whole lot of good to be nervous, because then you miss the whole game.

Meet your long-lost cousins.

OK, so they're not really your cousins, but apes are a lot like humans. We both have fingers and thumbs. We have the exact same number of teeth (32). And neither of us has tails. We're even both fairly... intelligent.

Some experts claim that about 10 million years ago, humans and apes were the same animal, called Ramapithecus. But at some point, they say, we started standing up straight and dressing to go out. The apes stayed real hairy and preferred swinging in trees or walking on their feet and knuckles.

Of course, now we think we're a lot smarter. But who's really to say? Read on to find out what other cool things apes have in common with each other—and with us.

APES

EDITED BY ANDREW RAGAN

You've got four kinds of apes:

gorillas,
chimpanzees,
orangutans
and gibbons.
And each has its own way of looking at things.

PLANET

GIBBONS

Vital Statistics They're about 3 feet tall and usually weigh about 15 pounds—that's why they're called the lesser apes. In the wild, they live to be about 25.

Chow Fruit (mostly figs), some leaves.

Hangouts The jungles of Southeast Asian countries, such as Thailand and Malaysia.

Hangtime Gibbons live the swinging life in the tallest of the tall jungle trees—nearly 200 feet off the ground.

Coolness Gibbons absolutely love figs. But they won't eat one until they've turned it over and over, checking for bruises. Parts they're not happy with, they toss.

GORILLAS

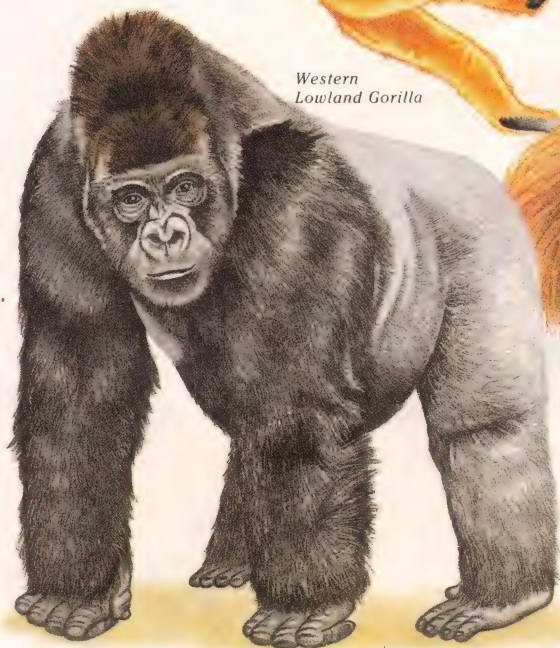

Vital Statistics Males can be more than 6 feet tall and tip the scale at 450 pounds (the size of two American Gladiator guys). Females weigh in at a petite 200 pounds. Wild gorillas live into their 50s.

Chow Leaves, bark, vines, fruit, wild celery, bamboo and lots more. Not exactly Cap'n Crunch, but lots of fiber.

Hangouts Lowland and mountain forests of Central and West Africa.

Hangtime Gorillas hang out in groups of up to 30 members. They spend most of the day catching Zs, eating or looking for food—but they still find time to play.

Coolness Gorillas can talk to one another with about 20 different sounds. They also cry, yawn, cough, burp, huff and get the hiccups.

ORANGUTANS

Vital Statistics Orangutans get to be about 4 feet tall. Males weigh about 160 pounds; females are about half that size. Their arms are $1\frac{1}{2}$ times longer than their legs, giving them an 8-foot arm span. Orangutans live to be about 40 in the wild.

Chow Tons of fruit; sometimes leaves and bark.

Hangouts The lowland rain forests on the islands of Sumatra and Borneo in Southeast Asia.

Hangtime Orangutans are born in trees as high as 80 feet up and spend most of their lives there.

Coolness Orangutan means "man of the woods" in Malay. To find them in the dense jungle, just look for the whites of their eyes—they're the only apes that have whites.

CHIMPANZEES

Vital Statistics Male chimps are about 4 feet tall and 110 pounds. (Yet they're stronger than a 6-foot-tall man.) Females are shorter and 20 pounds lighter. Wild chimps live to be about 40 years old.

Chow Chimps eat fruits, leaves, seeds, flowers, ants, eggs and fish. Some even hunt animals and eat meat. No other apes do that.

Hangouts The rain forests, woodlands and dry grasslands of Central and West Africa.

Hangtime Chimps spend about eight hours a day on the ground hunting for food. The rest of the time they're in the trees, eating or sleeping.

Coolness Chimps put in an hour or two each day picking bugs and dirt out of each other's hair.

THE Great Pretenders

ne glimpse of a full-grown gorilla, and you know why no other animal in the wild messes with him. We're talking 400 pounds of pure muscle and the strength of maybe eight Arnold Schwarzeneggers—plus humongous teeth that chomp tree bark like Cheetos and an arm span longer than Michael Jordan is tall.

If the male gorilla leader, or silverback, thinks you're a threat, he'll stand up on his legs, slap his chest, roar and even charge.

(The silverback gets his name from his back hair, which turns silver with age.)

Never stare too hard into the eyes of a wild gorilla. That's like asking for a fight.

But here's the word from Jennifer Chatfield, gorilla keeper of the Los Angeles Zoo: Gorillas are mostly bluff. They'd much rather scare intruders away than hurt them (and that usually works). In fact, gorillas can be the gentlest creatures around.

Gorillas have been seen petting and playing with frogs and other small animals.

The silverback himself lets kid gorillas crawl all over him and tease him like crazy. And Dian Fossey, a researcher who studied gorillas in Zaire and Rwanda, once saw a silverback pick up a flower and tickle a young gorilla with it.

THE NOSE KNOWS

What's the best way to tell one gorilla from another? By its nose print, of course. (But good luck getting it!) One gorilla's nose print measured $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide!

BRAINIACS

Dr. Francine Patterson, cofounder of The Gorilla Foundation, has taught gorillas Koko and Michael to use American Sign Language. Koko now uses more than 800 different signs to “talk” with people. Michael uses more than 350 signs. (For Once they’re a little older, the kids wrestle, slide down tree trunks, chase each other, dress up in leafy branches, and play King of the Hill and Follow the Leader. They even play ball games with pieces of round fruit.

According to Craig Sholley, you follow the rules of gorilla etiquette.” That means sitting quietly when you’re near them, never interfering with their kids, and munching on some leaves.

CHIMPAN

YOU'RE SO-O-O-O VAIN

Researchers believe chimps can recognize themselves in a pool of water. And as far as they can tell, humans are the only other animal that can do that.

she's not stingy. A few hoots and soon she's sharing the goods with the rest of the bunch.

But there is more to a chimp's life than just good times. One of the male chimps has to become the boss, and that usually means some serious branch-shaking, rock-throwing and charging to see who's the fiercest chimp of all. Once that's settled, the chimps make up by kissing, hugging,

If you're the type who likes to hang with your buds, this is the ape for you. Chimpanzees do the group thing more than any other great ape. Chimp troops sometimes have more than 45 members.

And they do like to party, says the Los Angeles Zoo's chimp keeper, Vicki Bingaman. When one chimp finds an excellent tree full of bananas or other fruit, holding hands and even tickling each other.

Chimps are also extremely smart, according to Jane Goodall, the world-champion chimp expert. Jane's been trooping with chimps in the rain forests of Tanzania, Africa, for 30 years.

Chimps are the only animals besides us who actually make and use tools, says Jane. She's seen them strip branches and stick them in termite holes.

When the branches become covered with termites, the chimps pull them out and eat the bugs. Chimps also use twigs to get honey out of beehives, make sponges out of leaves for a squirt of cool water, and chew the end of twigs to make flyswatters.

That kind of cleverness makes chimps the most intelligent apes of all—and second in overall smarts only to us.

—Sarah Gallop

CHIMPS X 2

There are two main types of chimpanzees: the common chimp and the bonobo. The bonobo is a bit smaller than its cousin, and smarter, too. He's also a stylin' little dude: His hair automatically parts down the middle and sometimes grows out sideways.

Brat Pack

What has superlong arms, supershort legs, and a flap of skin half the size of a dinner plate on each cheek? Your little brother? Good guess, but try orangutans.

These mighty orange dudes from the rain forests of Indonesia may have one thing in common with your little bro, however. "Orangutans are obnoxious," says Jeanette Tonnies, a zookeeper at the Los Angeles Zoo. "When they want to get your attention, they hold a door open so you can't close it, or spit water in your face, things like that."

Two years ago Jeanette visited the Orangutan Project on the Southeast Asian island of Borneo. She hung out with Biruté Galdikas, a woman who's been studying orangutans for more than 20 years.

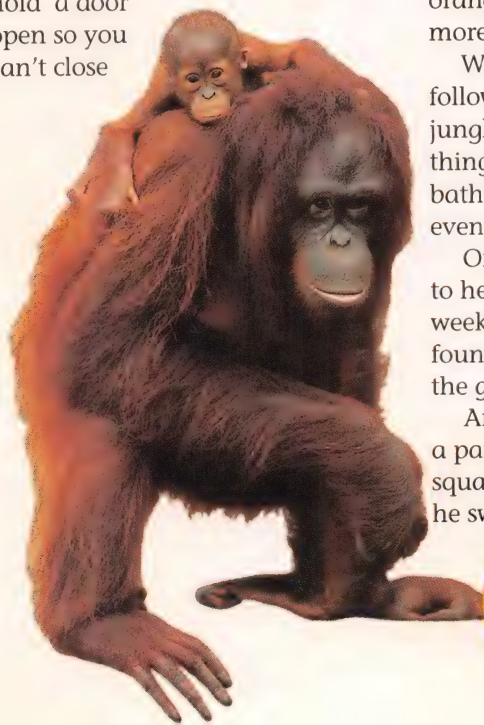

When Biruté first began following the orange apes in the jungles, they would yell and throw things at her. They did the bathroom bit on her head. They even threw dead trees at her.

Once the orangutans got used to her, Biruté followed them for weeks at a time. One thing she found out: These apes—especially the guys—do not like a crowd.

An adult male orangutan picks a part of the jungle as large as two square miles to call his own. Then he swings alone, feasting on fruit

LIP SERVICE

Orangutans use their lips to carry fruit when they are swinging. They pucker up to feel the skin of fruit before taking a bite. And they use their lips to make faces to show emotions.

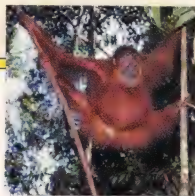

ORA

Watch Your Back

When zookeeper Jeanette Tonnies first began working with orangutans six years ago, she hated them. One day they wouldn't stop pelting her with food while she was cleaning their area, so she squirted them with a hose.

Bad move. One of the red apes snatched the hose away. By the time Jeanette got it back, the place was drenched and the hose was mangled.

Jeanette has more tales of orangutan high jinks from her visit to Biruté Galdikas's Orangutan Project in Borneo. The orangutans who live at the camp love to break into bungalows or the dining hall and steal towels, sunscreen, food and sodas. (They pull off the bottle caps with their teeth.) They especially like to take clothes from the riverbank while people swim. —S.B.

solo. For the first two years of his life, he clings to his mom's back or side. If his mom tries to put him down he throws a tantrum.

Around the age of two, though, the little orangutan loosens up. He still hangs with his mom for a few years, then he hooks up with all day long.

Of course, no orangutan starts out other teen orangutans.

These guys' favorite activity is crashing parties of the female teens. The girls either run away or send the intruders packing with a few swift kicks or sharp bites!

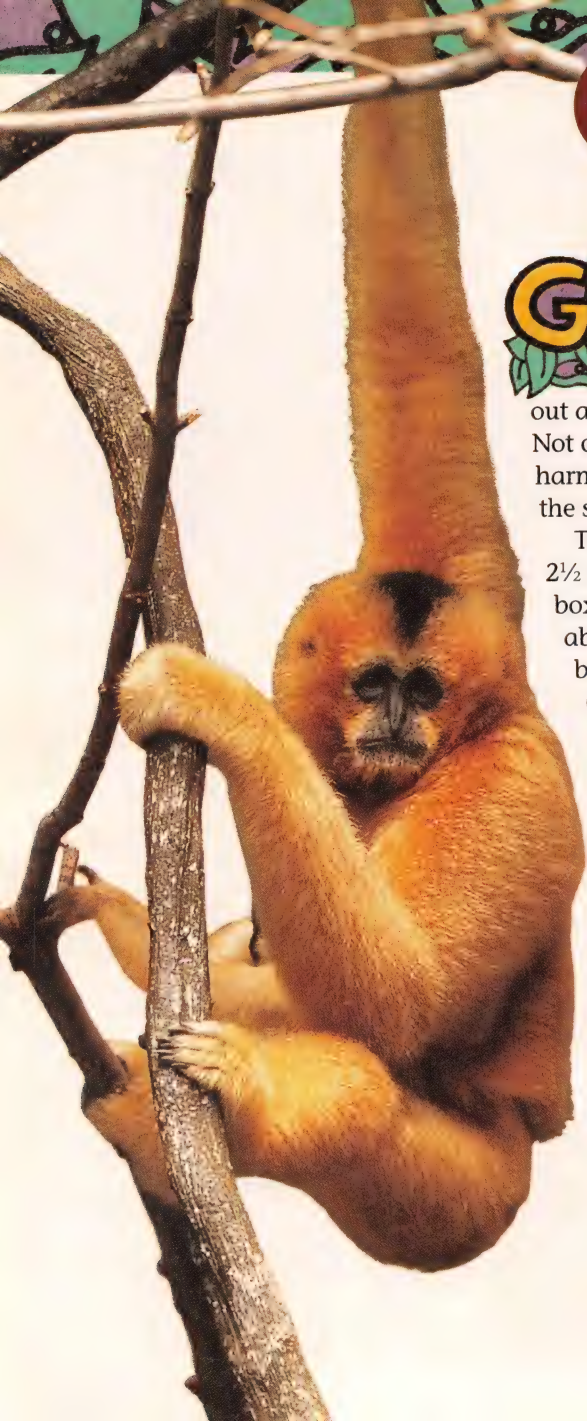

But then comes that urge to be alone. Oh, an orang might travel with a pal for a few days. But this ape is the ultimate bachelor, a ramblin' man to the end.

—Samantha Bonar

Older male orangutans grow beards and these weird flesh flaps, called flanges, on the sides of their faces. They're most likely for, uh, good looks.

ORANGUTANS

M.C. Ape

Gorillas, chimps and orangutans may be the biggest apes, but none of them can belt out a tune like some gibbons. Not only do these guys harmonize but they also jam to the same beat. Really.

Their tunes travel up to 2½ miles—without a boom box. Yet gibbons only stand about 3 feet tall and weigh between 9 and 16 pounds. (Your pet cat weighs maybe 10 pounds.)

Thanks to their light weight, gibbons can live in the highest treetops of the Southeast Asian rain forests—sometimes 180

THE GAP FOR GIBBONS

The gibbons' fur seems to change color as often as we buy new clothes. Some species are born with white fur, then turn dark as teens, and change back to white as adults.

Not to mention their mohawks and other wild hairstyles...

GIBBONS

FAMILY MAN Unlike the great apes, gibbons neither hang out in big groups nor by themselves. They stick to the basic family unit: mom, dad, kids. But once you're six or seven years old in this family, you're booted out on your own.

feet up. That doesn't keep them completely out of danger, of course.

Leopards and snakes climb trees, and eagles dive from above.

But even leopards and eagles have a tough time snaring a gibbon. These are the fastest, most acrobatic apes in the jungle. These guys swing along from branch to branch and leap as far as 50 feet in one shot (the length of four cars in a row). Try that with a baby on your back, the way gibbon mothers do.

And gibbons are quick! They've even been seen snatching flying birds!

But back to the music. One species, siamang gibbons, are like jungle musicians. They get their big sound from huge pouches beneath their necks that inflate like balloons to magnify their voices. Researchers figure the songs allow siamangs to let others know who's the boss in each family's fig-filled feeding area.

Or maybe they just want to make a record.

SUPERPEOPLE

D.A.'s Kids
Go Behind-the-Scenes of TV's

“American Gladiators”

Gladiator Sky, right, battles a contender in The Joust.

They're rough. They're tough. They pick on people half their size. Who are they? American Gladiators—TV's toughest athletes.

But you have to be more than tough to be a Gladiator—you have to excel at some strange events. In Human Cannonball, Gladiators stand on a 7-foot platform, trying to dodge contenders swinging toward them. For Hang Tough, they play a game of chicken on a jungle gym. And in Skytrack, they race contenders from one end of a Velcro™ track to another—hanging upside down.

We wanted to know how strong these Gladiators really are, so we sent two of our readers to hang with them.

Sky stands 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 187 pounds. This is her second season with the show. She spends her days running around in a hamster ball (the Atlasphere) but hangs out at night with her 9-year-old daughter, Ashley.

D.A.: How did you decide you wanted to be a Gladiator?

★ Sky: I used to compete in bodybuilding championships, and I heard there was an opening on the show. I wasn't going to try out, but my daughter said, "C'mon, Mom, do it!" Now Ashley's really psyched that I'm on the show because she's become extremely popular in school.

D.A.: What were tryouts like?

★ Sky: We had to do 25 pull-ups in 30 seconds, run a 50-yard dash, climb a rope, joust with another contestant, and perform all these other physical challenges. Then after we were all hot, sweaty and out of breath, we would have to stand in front of a camera and answer questions. The tryouts lasted three days. Each day they got rid of more people.

D.A.: How did you get your Gladiator name?

★ Sky: Well, I started with Athena, which I didn't mind because she was the goddess of war. But all the other Gladiators nicknamed me Sky, as in "reach out and touch the," and it stuck. The show's producers liked it, so they changed my name.

D.A.: What's your average day like?

★ Sky: It depends on whether we're shooting. We compete twice a day during the six weeks we tape the show. During the off-season—that's the rest of the year, unless we go on tour—I just do normal stuff. Work out, hang out, lift weights.

D.A.: Are you really 6 foot 3?

★ Sky: I really am. When I was 10 years old, I was already 6 feet tall. People always used to look at me in the supermarket. But when I tried out for the “American Gladiators,” they were looking for a larger-than-life quality. I guess with my height, I fit the bill.

D.A.: Do you ever eat things you’re not supposed to?

★ Sky: Every day. Without some chocolate, I’d go crazy.

Laser, left, competing in Hang Tough, tries to pull a contender from the rings.

Laser played pro football before joining the Gladiators in 1988. As one of the original tough guys, he has seen a lot of competitors come and go. But he says he’s never been afraid of any of them. “When you’re a Gladiator, it’s up to you to be the best all the time. That means being better than every other guy in the arena,” he says.

D.A.: Do you exercise every day?

★ Laser: Yes, for about two hours. I do everything from lifting weights to cardio workouts. I used to play tennis and racquetball, but I hurt my arm doing the show so I stopped.

D.A.: What’s the heaviest weight you’ve ever lifted?

★ Laser: Six hundred pounds.

D.A.: How many meals do you eat a day?

★ Laser: Six big meals.

D.A.: What do you eat before going on TV?

★ Laser: Twelve egg whites, two egg yolks, and oatmeal with cinnamon and applesauce.

D.A.: Do you practice before you go up against the other guys?

★ Laser: No. Well, I take that back. We have a four-day rehearsal period before filming starts. But when it comes to all the different events, you either have it or you don’t.

D.A.: What do you like best?

★ Laser: Powerball, without a doubt.

D.A.: Do people come up to you on the street?

★ Laser: Not so much here in Los Angeles, where I live. But everywhere else, kids go crazy. They always want our autographs and want us to make muscles for them.

WOW, WHAT A MOVIE! YOUR FAVORITE HERO LEAPS THROUGH THE AIR TO KICK, FLIP AND BOP A DOZEN SNARLING VILLAINS. HE—OR SHE—IS USING MARTIAL ARTS TO DEFEAT EVIL. IN REAL LIFE, KIDS CAN LEARN MARTIAL ARTS FOR SPORT AS WELL AS SELF-DEFENSE. HERE'S A CLOSE-UP LOOK AT THE MAJOR MARTIAL ARTS AND THEIR CHAMPS.

arts mania!

J U D O

The Sport: Judo means “the gentle way.”

It became popular in Japan in 1871 when swords were outlawed and samurai warriors had to use their hands to defend themselves.

The Moves: You can flip or trip an opponent, but the most important move is the bow. Players bow before and after every match to thank each other for a chance to improve.

A Champ: Belgium-born Ingrid Berghmans took up judo when she was nine. At 19, she became a world champ. “It was wonderful,” she says, “but I still had to do my schoolwork, and suddenly people were asking me to do interviews and go to parties. So I learned to say no. I don’t know if I was polite.”

KARATE

The Sport:

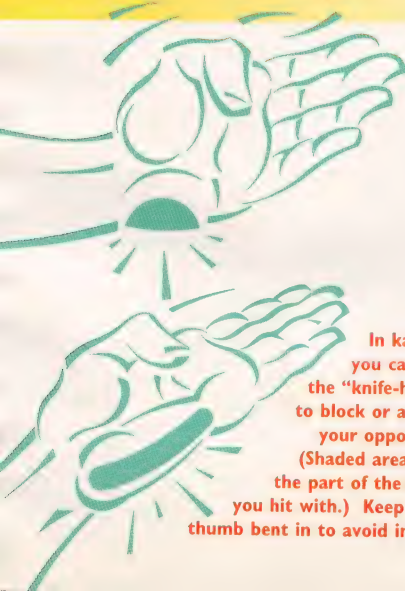

Karate, which means “empty hand,” was developed in India and soon spread throughout Asia.

The Moves: Spies in James Bond movies are always chopping at each other with the sides of their hands.

This move is called “knife-hand strikes” or shuto-uchi.

A Champ: Fifty-year-old Edward Brown (left) can break a stack of 15 bricks with a single chop and can pound nails into wood with his fist. He thinks he developed his “hand power” because he’s short. “Big guys hit the top of the punching bag,” he says. “But us short guys hit the bottom where the filler settles. After awhile, we hit harder.”

In karate, you can use the “knife-hand” to block or attack your opponent. (Shaded areas are the part of the hand you hit with.) Keep your thumb bent in to avoid injury.

The Sport:

Ninjutsu is the "shadow warriors'" art. If you've seen The Three Ninjas, you know that ninjutsu warriors sneak around dressed in black hoods.

The Moves:

Ninjutsu warriors punch, kick and fight with swords and star-shaped knives. (It's even fair to pull each other's hair!)

A Champ: Because Ninjutsu is so secret, no experts were willing to talk to us.

KUNG FU

The Sport: Kung fu, which means "using martial arts to help the weak," was developed 400 years ago by a woman in Tibet.

The Moves: Before fighters leap into the air or kick each other, they stand with their feet apart in a position called ye chi kim yeaung mar, or the main horse stance.

A Champ: "Kung fu is a great martial art for kids," says 1992 World Champion V. Vizzio. "Kung fu moves are more complicated than other martial arts. There's a lot to remember. This trains kids to concentrate and helps in doing schoolwork." (So if your parents don't like your report card, tell them you need to take kung fu lessons!)

BOXING

The Sport: Kick boxing, which developed from a martial art called Thai boxing, is popular with Madonna and other Hollywood stars. (It is said that warriors in Scotland invented their own form of kick boxing more than a thousand years ago—but the Scots only kicked each other's shins. That made sense because the Scots were wearing kilts!)

The Moves: Kick boxers wear foot padding as they swing "roundhouse kicks" (called mawashi-geri) into their opponents' chins and chests.

A Champ: Former World Champion Don "The Dragon" Wilson was a major high-school athlete, participating in Martial arts expert Eric Lee practices kung fu on balance poles.

Kung fu fighters often start off in this main horse stance.

Right: Ernie Reyes, Jr.

TAE KWON DO

The Sport: Korean karate is known as tae kwon do, which means

“the way of kicking and punching.”

The Moves: Perhaps the most effective move is “keeping a blank face.” Instead of snarling at an opponent, just look at him as if you were “viewing a distant mountain.” That way, he’ll never be able to tell what you’re going to do!

A Champ: Twenty-year-old Ernie Reyes, Jr., star of the movie Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, learned tae kwon do when he was five years old. He was taught by his dad, a black-belt champ. “Martial arts isn’t just kicking and punching,” Ernie says. “It’s discipline and respect.”

football, basketball and track and field. One day his brother, a kick boxer, challenged him to a fight. “Here was my runt brother,” Don says. “I figured I was big and didn’t need martial arts.” But after his “runt” brother knocked him to the floor, Don changed his mind. “I discovered martial arts really do work,” he says.

Hey.

This is gonna be kind of gross, so don't say I didn't warn you.

Last Sunday we all got together for pizza in the A-ZONE. Everyone was there: me, Chiphead, Lizzie, MC², Dozmo, Blubb, and, of course, Chip's dog. We had finally agreed on sausage and mushrooms when Blubb looked at Lizzie and said, "Some people put dead fish on their pizza. That's what they're gonna put on yours. Big, ugly, dead, smelly fish!"

Here we go again, I thought.

"Oh, yeah," yelled Lizzie.

"You know what they're gonna put on yours? Big, fat, juicy frogs covered with cheese. Frogs that are still...alive and jumping."

"Lizzie," Chip said, giving his sister the look. Lizzie quieted down.

If water is clear, how come storm clouds are dark?

Kenly Farmer, 12

Greenville, South Carolina

Storm clouds look dark from below because the water in them is blocking the sun's rays. Storms happen when the air becomes really heavy with moisture. As more moisture accumulates in a cloud, the cloud gets bigger, drops lower to the Earth and grows really thick—so thick that rays from the sun can't get through it. That's why it looks dark.

How does something rocking back and forth put you to sleep?

John Champion, 11

Chattanooga, Tennessee

When Blubb was a baby, he used to cry so loudly and at such a high pitch, all the neighborhood dogs would howl. So in order to get some sleep, I figured out what kept him quiet.

Babies like to be rocked for a couple of reasons. One is that, often from the time kids are born, parents rock them to sleep. So the rocking reminds them of sleep—and they nod off. The other reason is that babies—and lots of grown-ups too—feel more comfortable when things are repeated over and over, like a windshield wiper's movement or a mellow song. So by rocking a baby back and forth, back and forth, you can calm him down and make him sleepy.

Why does it tingle when you hit your funny bone?

Laura Gibson, 11

Vass, North Carolina

Your elbow is the meeting place or "joint" of three bones. The one that comes from your upper arm to your elbow is your humerus (pronounced like humorous, as in ha ha ha.)

Behind your humerus is a large nerve called the ulnar nerve. When you hit your elbow on something hard, the nerve gets pressed between the bone and the object. This pressure makes the nerve hurt.

Well, that's it for now. Next month I'll write about why people get goose bumps.

HAVE FUN. MOM
AND I ARE GOING TO THE MALL!

BUT SOON DARLA
BECOMES BUMMED.

I MISS
MATTHEW! I
WANT TO GO HOME!

CHILL OUT,
DAR. LOOK AT ME. THERE'S TONS OF STUFF
TO DO HERE.

CHILL YOURSELF!
WHY DON'T YOU, LIKE,
GO AND PLAY GOLF
OR SOMETHING?

SOON, THE OTHER TROLLS
TEASE DARLA...

GAG ME WITH A BULLDOZER!
BOGUS THREADS!

DOES YOUR MOTHER
ALWAYS DRESS YOU
SO FUNNY?

YOU'LL NEVER
LEAVE THE TOY
STORE LOOKING LIKE THAT!

SOB, SOB I HATE IT HERE.
I DON'T LOOK LIKE ALL THE
OTHER TROLLS.

I DON'T WEAR MY
HAIR LIKE EVERYONE
ELSE. I DON'T DRESS
LIKE EVERYONE ELSE.

I DON'T EVEN HAVE A MASERATI LIKE
EVERYONE ELSE!

DAY BY DAY, DARLA BECOMES MORE AND MORE DEPRESSED.

WHAT'S WRONG NOW, SIS?

EVERYBODY HATES ME! THE OTHER TROLLS THINK I SHOULD BE MELTED DOWN AND TURNED INTO A MUTANT NINJA GOPHER.

YOU CAN BE COOL, DAR. WHY DON'T YOU GET YOURSELF A NEW 'DO LIKE I DID?

YUCCH! MAJOR GROSS! YOU'D NEVER WEAR THAT BACK HOME.

C'MON, SIS--GIVE IT A TRY.

WELL, OKAY. BUT ONLY IF I DON'T LOOK AS GROSS AS YOU!

AND SHORTLY AFTERWARDS...

WOW! THESE ARE, LIKE, JUST TOTALLY RAD! JUST WHAT I'M LOOKING FOR!

AND I KNOW "THEY'LL" LIKE THEM, TOO.

DARLA, IT'S DARK IN HERE.

BUTTON YOUR LIP, PEA BRAIN. AT LEAST WE'RE OUT OF THAT AWFUL TOY STORE.

BUT WHERE ARE WE GOING?

Just Arrived!

THIS SIDE UP

FRAGILE

THE NEXT DAY THE STARS OF THE HIT TV SHOW, "BEVERLY HILLS, 90210," ARE TAKING A BREAK, WHEN...

OH, LOOK WHAT ONE OF OUR FANS SENT US.

COOL! I WANT THEM FOR MY DRESSING ROOM!

DARREN, DID YOU HEAR THAT? WE'RE GOING TO LUKE'S DRESSING ROOM. I THINK I'M GONNA FAINT!

THEY'RE SOOOO CUTE.

I THINK I'M GONNA HURL!

BUT LUKE'S DRESSING ROOM IS ONLY THE BEGINNING, FOR ONCE THE PRODUCER OF "90210" SEES THE TROLL TWINS...

LISTEN, KIDS, I'M GOING TO MAKE YOU STARS! YOU'LL HAVE YOUR OWN SHOW, YOUR OWN T-SHIRTS AND WATCHES AND TOYS AND DOLLS AND...

LATER...

AND DON'T FORGET, AFTER THE FIRST EPISODE OF "TROLL BOULEVARD," THERE'S AN ALL-NEW EPISODE OF "MELROSE TROLL"...

BUD, TELL SCHWARTZ I WANT TEN MILLION UP FRONT. AND I WANT MY OWN DRESSING PALACE. AND I WANT...

DARLA! WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

SILLY, I'M TALKING TO MY AGENT! I'M SOOOO GLAD WE MOVED TO BEVERLY HILLS!

Let Sleeping Dogs

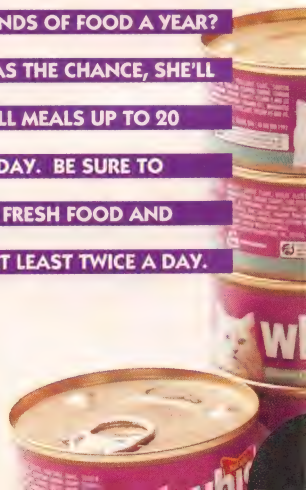

...and Other Responsible Pet-Care Tips

Color illustrations: Mike Dietz

Did you know...that Chihuahuas are the smallest dogs (only five inches tall at the shoulder) and that Irish wolfhounds are the largest (almost three feet tall)? But no matter how big or small, dogs need plenty of sleep. In fact, healthy puppies sleep almost all day, while full-grown dogs spend about half the day napping. Wonder what they're dreaming about?

DID YOU KNOW...THAT AN 8-
TO 10-POUND CAT EATS ABOUT
175 POUNDS OF FOOD A YEAR?
IF SHE HAS THE CHANCE, SHE'LL
EAT SMALL MEALS UP TO 20 TIMES A DAY. BE SURE TO PROVIDE FRESH FOOD AND WATER AT LEAST TWICE A DAY.

(and Cats) Lie...

Black and white illustrations: Steven Stewart

Did you know...that a cat once walked 1,500 miles to find its family? The cat's owners moved from California to Oklahoma, leaving it behind with neighbors. Fourteen months later, the cat showed up on its owners' doorstep. It probably tracked them down by using its sense of smell. To make sure your pet doesn't have to do that, buy a tag that lists your name, address and phone number and attach it to your pet's collar.

Did you know...that a 50-pound dog, such as a golden retriever, eats 1,000 pounds of canned dog food in a year?

DID YOU KNOW...
THAT WHISKERS ARE
THE MOST SENSITIVE
HAIRS ON A CAT'S
BODY? CATS USE THEM
AS FEELERS TO MAKE SURE THEY CAN GET THROUGH TIGHT
SPACES. WHISKERS
ALSO HELP CATS FEEL
THE SHAPES OF
OBJECTS THAT ARE TOO CLOSE FOR THEIR EYES TO FOCUS ON,
AND, OF COURSE,
WHISKERS LOOK
TOTALLY COOL!

Did you know...that a cat has 230 bones in its body? That's why it's so flexible and can bend and twist its body when grooming itself. But a cat needs a little help keeping its coat smooth. Use a pet brush, pet comb or grooming glove to untangle your cat's hair.

Did you know...that a dog doesn't cool its body by sweating, like you do? Instead, it sticks out its tongue and pants so that water evaporates from the mouth to cool its body. Never leave a dog in a parked car with all the windows rolled up, even for a short time; he may not be able to cool his body quickly enough and may become overheated. (Speaking of panting: If you want to talk to your dog, try panting loudly. The dog won't think you're hot—panting can mean laughter in dog language.)

CHUCK ROCKS YOUR SUPER NES!

He's fat, he stinks and he's one of the best-loved characters ever to climb his way out of the primordial slime and onto your video screen. In this rockin' new 16-bit adventure for your Super NES, you'll join Chuck Rock on his belly-bashing, odor-kicking, rock-tossing mission to rescue his wife Ophelia from arch-rival Gary Gritter. You and Chuck, who's equipped with a pea-sized brain and nuclear body odor, have to crush some

A chilly Chuck meets up with the woolly mammoth pretty strange characters, like the wild and woolly mammoth, one mean triceratops and a saber-toothed tiger who's permanently hot under the collar. Together, you and the Chuckster swim through swamps, travel up volcanoes and shiver your way through the ice age — all in the name of love! Nineteen levels set in five prehistoric worlds. Eye-popping graphics and very cool animation. If you wanna rock, you gotta get Chuck Rock.

Elvis Cards

Rare.

Very Rare.

What makes the Preview Edition of the 1993 PLAYOFF™ Football Cards so rare?

Simple. We didn't print very many.

Most trading card sets are over 700 cards. Plenty for everybody, including players you never heard of.

With PLAYOFF™ Football Cards, it's a whole different story.

There are only 150 cards in the set.

Total. And only the best players from traditional Playoff teams such as Washington, Buffalo, San Francisco, Denver, Dallas and other players who are having a great individual year.

Plus these are the coolest looking cards yet, 50% thicker than most other cards. And the set is going to go down in history as the first 1993 football trading cards to be issued.

What makes the Preview Edition of the 1993 PLAYOFF™ Football Cards so rare? Everything.
